Word on the street

Are you going to one of society's smartest jubilee parties?

By DAVINA MOTION

Late-night kissing on the dancefloor? It happened the last time Lady Natasha Rufus Isaacs, Mary Fellowes and Nicky Haslam gathered for cocktails at The Ritz to celebrate Her Majesty's Diamond Jubilee. A decade on, the Queen is going Platinum. Naturally, the social set's turning the smartest streets in London and beyond into party central.

Elizabeth Street, Belgravia

'We are always having a party,' says Philip Treacy, who is putting together an archival display of hats for jubilee passersby. On the corner with Ebury Street, the Ganymede – society landlord Hubert Beatson-Hird's pub – will be full of festive spirit. Prince Harry secretly attended his jubilee party at The Sands End pub in 2012; this year, at the Ganymede, expect to see regulars Andrew Lloyd Webber and Brigadier Andrew Parker Bowles sipping pints and admiring the RAF fly-past. There will also be a horse-and-carriage chauffeur to take merry guests on rides around Eaton Square.

Christchurch Terrace, Chelsea

Brewing scion Jack Greenall is firing up the barbecue at The Surprise pub for the local society millennial contingent (look out for Lady Kitty Spencer, Louisa Wentworth-Stanley, Marcus Worsley and Max Dodd-Noble). He has a lot to live up to: the Greenall family has been throwing eccentric jubilee parties since 1750. This year, punters can look forward to a Cornish oyster bar and strawberries with lashings of cream – and join the throngs twirling in the street to a live swing band. 'There are rumours of a jive competition,' Jack says.

Epsom Racecourse

Hugh Stanley is hellbent on 'bringing Stanley's to Epsom' to salute the jubilee in style. By Stanley's, he means his Chelsea restaurant, where the Marquess and Marchioness of Blandford, Jemima Cadbury and David Tollemache all dine. He'll host 180 guests in a two-floor marquee, with top tables for Guy and Ben Sangster, the Earl and Countess of Derby and Lord Stanley. Find Angus MacAlpine and Mylo Sangster on the balcony watching the equestrian action.

North Audley Street, Mayfair

As curators of The Mayfair Jubilee Party, tablescaping sisters Lady Alice Herbert and Lady Jemima Davies are gathering decorative swans, topiary and wildflowers to adorn the 200ft table for what Herbert declares will be 'Mayfair's biggest and chicest street party'. Expected attendees include Jenny Packham (the Duchess of Cambridge's go-to designer) and Annika Purdey. You may spot Richard and Patricia Caring floating between Harry's Bar and members' club George, or Mayfair darling Emma Bath, who has her own regal tribute at Longleat: an exhibition capturing the Coronation of Elizabeth II.

Chelsea

Blooming across SW3, the Chelsea Flower Show (an annual highlight for Her Majesty) has a 'British Icons' theme, with floral work depicting the Queen. Spot Lady Eliza and Lady Amelia Spencer admiring the installations. Locals bet Emerald Fennell will pass by Duke of York Square for the Platinum Pageant, shown on screen. Catch local Sol Campbell celebrating on the King's Road, and Saskia Connery parked on Pavilion Road with fiancé Phillip Thomas Muhr. 'The Queen knighted my grandfather,' she tells Tatler proudly. □
