When searching for the best things to do in London each weekend, it's hard not to end up more confused and indecisive than when you started. While it's never a bad idea to secure a booking at one of the best restaurants in the capital, spend an evening in one of the latest innovative bars on the scene, or even explore an iconic London attraction, we're always on the lookout for new, exciting pop-ups, openings and events. Each week, we get the inside track on exciting things to do in London for the upcoming weekend to help us discover a new area of the city or explore a new address in a neighbourhood we (thought) we'd already uncovered. This week, we're chatting to emerging international artists at an exciting pop-up in a Chelsea pub, satiating our bagel cravings at an exciting new opening on the Strand, and entertaining the little people in our lives at a new permanent gallery in the Natural History Museum.

Meet the Artists

1. Meet the artists in Chelsea

The Surprise in Chelsea has teamed up with Partnership Editions, the affordable art curators, for a 'meet the artists' event attended by some of the UK's most exciting emerging artists. Creatives in attendance include sculptor Lucy Whitford, Swedish ceramist Fanny Schultz, Cornwall-based illustrator Tabby Booth and many others. Book an appointment with any of the artists throughout the day or join Tabby's interactive painting workshop upstairs in The Hamilton Room on Tuesday evening.

Address: The Surprise, 6 Christchurch Terrace, London SW3 4AJ
