

HOTDINNERS

CATHERINE HANLY | 13 JANUARY 2026

As the temperature falls and salad days seem like a faraway prospect, it's time to turn to cheese - melted cheese specifically. There's no time of the year quite like winter for firing up a fondue and attempting not to lose your bread in the mix. From old-school Swiss institutions to modern Alpine bier halls, here's where to get a great fondue in London.

The Winter Lodge

Bloomsbury- 15 Montague St,
London WC1B 5BJ

The Winter Lodge is a seasonal pop-up experience running till the end of March at The Montague on the Gardens in Bloomsbury.

Book a two hour session in their ski lodge (£60 for two, £30 for each additional guest) and enjoy a cheese fondue made with melted Gruyère, Emmental and dry white wine. The fondue is served with crusty bread, new potatoes, gherkins, tomatoes and pickled onion, but there's also a range of sides you can add on, including Bratwurst and roast pumpkin. There are party packages available too, which get you exclusive use and include an arrival glass of mulled wine, spiced cider or punch.

Promoted listing

Albert's Schloss

Soho - 20-24 Shaftesbury Ave, London W1D 7EU

London's Alpine pleasure place Albert's Schloss is all about group dining and here there's no better meal to share between friends than one of their fondues. The one

HOTDINNERS

Boundary

Shoreditch - 2-4 Boundary St,
London E2 7DJ

Every winter the rooftop bar and restaurant transforms itself into an Alpine hideaway. Fondue is on the menu, of course, and here it's a traditional Fondue Savoyard complete with croutons and cornichons. You can also add in charcuterie as an extra.

See also:

The Surprise in Chelsea is having a month-long fondue offering called Melt in Chelsea for January. The fondue is being served with crisp salad and chips.

Vagabond wine bars are putting on a classic Swiss fondue offering for January. You can upgrade it to a black truffle version as well, or go all out and pair it with a glass of Champagne.

The Turkish brunch feast at Megan's includes a Turkish cheese fondue as part of a shareable spread.

Subscribe to hear the latest from Hot Dinners